

BEST COPY

AVAILABLE

CPYRIGHT

General Minister Fu Sung-Chu looks on as his wife pins a corsage on Mrs. Chenault (right) at a dinner held last night in the Yenching Palace in town. The party followed a reception at the Chinese Embassy.—Star Staff Photo.

General's Memory Honored

The late Gen. Claire Lee Chennault was honored at several functions over this weekend, which were to be climaxed with a memorial wreath-laying ceremony in Arlington National Cemetery this afternoon.

All of the gatherings were attended by members of the 14th Air Force Association and the Flying Tigers Association, who voted following the general's death in 1958 to meet each year on Memorial Day to honor his memory.

The existence of both associations is itself an unusual tribute to the leader of both groups, whose exploits in World War II were outstanding.

Before the ceremony at Arlington today the group of 100 or so, including the General's widow, Mrs. Chennault, were to gather at Arlington Towers for brunch as the guests of Air Force Col. Edward Rector, who came to the gathering, representing the West Coast members of the Flying Tigers.

Yesterday the group were guests at brunch of Mr. Thomas Corcoran in his Woodland Drive home. They had cocktails at the Chinese Embassy, and attended a dinner at Yenching Palace Restaurant. Mr. Corcoran was toastmaster at this event, and Scripps-Howard columnist Jim Lucas was the principal speaker.

Saturday the group were entertained by Mrs. Chennault at her home in northwest Washington.

CPYRIGHT